OUR RICHMOND LETTER.

Meeting of the Virginia Legislature and the Constitutional Amendment —Arrival of Gen. Grant in Richmond and what is thought of Him there— Rations of the Freedmen to be Stop-ped—Newspapers in Richmond &c.,

RICHMOND, Dec. 4, 1865.

REMEMOND, Dec. 4, 1885.

The Legislature will assemble to-day, with more than a quorum of both branches present. A little more than an organization of the respective bodies is anticipated. I shall not wait for the unimportant proceedings of electing the various officers and the other features usual in the organization of similar assemblies. The organization of the two houses will be readily effected, and without contest for the more important. without contest for the more important positions. Candidates for the subordipositions. Candidates for the subordinate offices are numerous, and are pressing their respective claims with an energy which promises considerable excitement. The Legislature presents a very fair average of ability, and among its members are many gentlemen of political and professional reputation. John B. Bildwin, of Augusta, will probably be the most prominent man in either body, and his counsels are looked for with very great interest, because of his well known sagacity, high character, and established reputation for liberal and comprehensive views. Information from reliable sources convince me that a spirit of moderation for liberal and comprehensive views. Information from reliable sources convince me that a spirit of moderation will control the Legislature and that its course will be influenced by a through and cordiat purpose to conform the State to the policy of the Administration, and thus accelerate the resumption of harmonious relations with the National Government, on the part of Virginia. Among the earliest proceedings will be the virtually unanimous ratification of the Constitutional Amendment prohibiting Slavery. The Alexandria Legislature, during the war, adopted the amendment, but it is considered not inappropriate that the measure shall receive whatever additional confirmation may attach to the sanction of the General Assembly, now when composed of representatives of the entire State. The repudiation of the Confederate war debt may meet with exceptional expressions of disfavor, but the opposition will neither avail nor signify anything. Both houses are composed, to a very great extent, of men of Conservative antecedents; moderate sentiments, and especially anti-secession antecedents, other things being equal, having in every instance, in the late election, received the preference. Nineteentwentleths of the two bodies are Old-Line Whigs, which, with the thoroughly Whig character of the co-ordinate branches of the State Government, places Old Virginia, for once in her history, entirely in the hands of the Whigs, says that at a late local convention all the churches of the Unitarian denomination in the Connecticut river valley, were represented. The statements of the results of the action organized by the national Untarian conference in New York last spring, were quite re-

What the Unitarians are Doing. The Springfield (Mass.) Republica

New York last spring, were quite remarkable. That convention, as the beginning of a broad and aggressive and missionary movement, voted that one hundred thousand dollars should be raised yearly for general missionary purposes; that one hundred thousand dollars should be raised at once to secure the control of Anticoh College, Ohio; that the two theological schools of the denomination, at Cambridge and Meadville, Pa., should be especially fostered; and that a new and broader religious journal, to be called the Liberal Christian, should be established.

"The one hundred thousand dollars for Anticoh College wars raised with the place must be filled, if she was expected to rise before half past seven. Between January 1st and June 28th, 1865, no less than three hundred and sixty-one persons were conveyed to the London hospitals to be treated for injuries from dogs.

A wag says it is "folly to expect a girl to love a man whom everybody speaks well of. Get up a persecution, and her affections will cling so fast that dozen guardians can't remove them."

The lower house of the Missouri legislature has adopted a resolution deformance of the control of Anticoh College.

"The one hundred thousand dollars r Antioch College were raised within to months, and that institution is now ider Unitarian management. effort to secure another hundred thous and dollars for the further endowmen and deliars for the further endowment of the institution is in a promising position. The first year's missionary fund was carried up to $110,000, and has been one-half expended in aid of churches east and west, in publications for the soldiers in the army, and in supporting missionaries in India and in the western states. The whole sum is wanted for the purposes of the year ending next spring; and between now and then, it is proposed to raise the second hundred thousand for the next year. To stimulate the churches of the car. To samulate the churches of the connecticut valley to their share in this ubscription, which is about two thousmd dollars, was a main object of the neeting; and a committee was appointed to apportion and secure the um. "Mr. Hale stated, that since the Na tional Convention twenty-nine additional Societies had been added to the list of the Unitarian denomination in list of the Unitarian denomination in the country. The plan of establishing a new paper had not been carried out; but the two present organs of the denomination, the Christian Inquirer at New York and the Register at Boston, had gained new and rich elements of power and usefulness, and their circulation was likely to greatly increase, in correspondence with their merits. The Christian Register had been purchased of Mr. Reed, its publisher for forty years, by an association of some thirty gentlemen, who intended to make it something more than a Unitarian weekly paper—a first class New England journal of literature, religion, education, morals, art and science. The Christian Examiner, the more stately periodical representative of the Unitarians, was to be removed to New York, and with large capital and the editorial supervision of Dr. Bellows, it would widen and popularize its chargant of influence.

Regarding his novements with some curiosity, the workmen proceeded to the spot, and noticed several letters floating about. The fact was at once communicated to the postoffice authorities. A special agent of the Postoffice Department, Mr. Kimball, happening to call at the postoffice at the time of the receipt of the note, was at once despatched to the place, and succeeded in recovering about one hunared letters.

"Professor Ferrior married a daughter of John Wilson, and edited the collected edition of his father-in-law's works. It is of his brother professor, Aytoun, who stood in the same relation to "Christopher North," that a story is told relative to a successful issue of his courtship. He took opportunity of "delaring his intentions" one morning when North was in his study, accompanied by the young lady. As soon as he finished his explanation, whose purport the reader may conceive, and was waiting with some anxiety the result, Professor Wilson saying nothing, took up one of the numerous presentation volumes lying around and tearing out a fly-lear with the incription "with the author's compliments," pluned it to his daughter's dress and handed her to young Aytoun without a word. them.
